Paul Martino

"The venture capital world: As a college student what do I need to know before taking the plunge?"

November 30 | Teletorium | Free Period

Paul Martino a local native and lead investor in companies such as FanDuel that wants to bring Silicon Valley to Philadelphia. Paul is the founder of four companies including Ahpah Software (a computer security firm acquired by InterTrust); Tribe (one of the world's first social networks), and Aggregate Knowledge (a big data advertising attribution company acquired in 2014 by Neustar). Paul's early online gaming innovations in multi-player user experience from almost 20 years ago are the inspiration for several of the modern social gaming offerings. He is the holder of over a dozen core patents covering social networking and big data.
